01 / What the page does

SECTION	PURPOSE	WHAT THE VISITOR SEES
Home / hero	Introduce the gym and direct attention to plans.	“BUILD YOUR STRONG.” headline, short supporting copy, and Explore Memberships link.
Training	Summarize key offerings.	Strength floor, personal coaching, and group energy cards.
Inside Forge	Show training categories.	Three gradient-backed panels for personal training, group workouts, and strength training.
Membership	Compare plans.	Starter, Unlimited, and Coaching cards with monthly prices, inclusions, and contact links.
Classes	Share a sample schedule.	Strength Circuit, HIIT Express, and Mobility & Core sessions with days and times.
Contact	Provide the next step.	Address, phone, email, and opening-hours placeholders plus a mailto contact button.

The prices and schedule are written directly into the markup. Treat them as sample business content until the gym confirms they are accurate.

02 / How it was built

The page uses standard browser technologies and keeps its presentation close to the content, which makes it straightforward to read and edit.

HTML: content and structure

The document defines a header and navigation, a main area divided into named sections, repeated feature and plan cards, a contact section, and a footer. Section IDs such as home, training, membership, classes, and contact provide navigation targets.

CSS: visual system

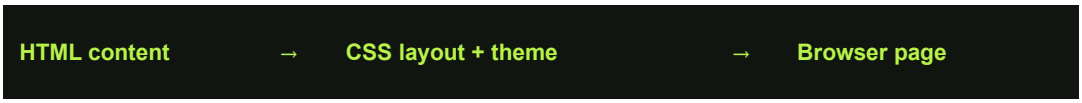

A small set of custom properties defines the charcoal background, lime accent, white text, muted gray, and card color. Shared rules style typography, buttons, cards, spacing, grids, and hover feedback, keeping the visual language consistent.

Layout and responsiveness

The three-column content uses CSS Grid. At widths below 800px, the grid becomes one column, the header stacks, and spacing is reduced. The hero headline uses clamp() to scale between screen sizes.

Reusable patterns

The same .card treatment is reused for training features, category panels, membership plans, and schedules. A .featured class highlights the Unlimited plan, while .photo-card creates gradient image-like panels without actual image files.

No JavaScript or external framework is present in the supplied file. The visual elements are created with HTML and CSS, and the navigation relies on built-in anchor links.

03 / How visitors use it

The page works as a simple information and navigation experience. Selecting a menu item or call-to-action link changes the browser location to a section on the same page.

VISITOR ACTION	PAGE RESPONSE	IMPLEMENTATION
Choose a nav item	Scrolls/jumps to the matching section.	Anchor href values match section id values.
Select Explore Memberships	Moves to the membership comparison.	Link target is #membership.
Select a plan button	Moves to the contact details.	All three plan buttons target #contact.
Hover over a card or nav link	Adds visual emphasis.	CSS hover rules adjust card position/border and link color.
Select Contact Us	Opens a new email draft in the visitor's email handler.	mailto link; address currently uses a placeholder.

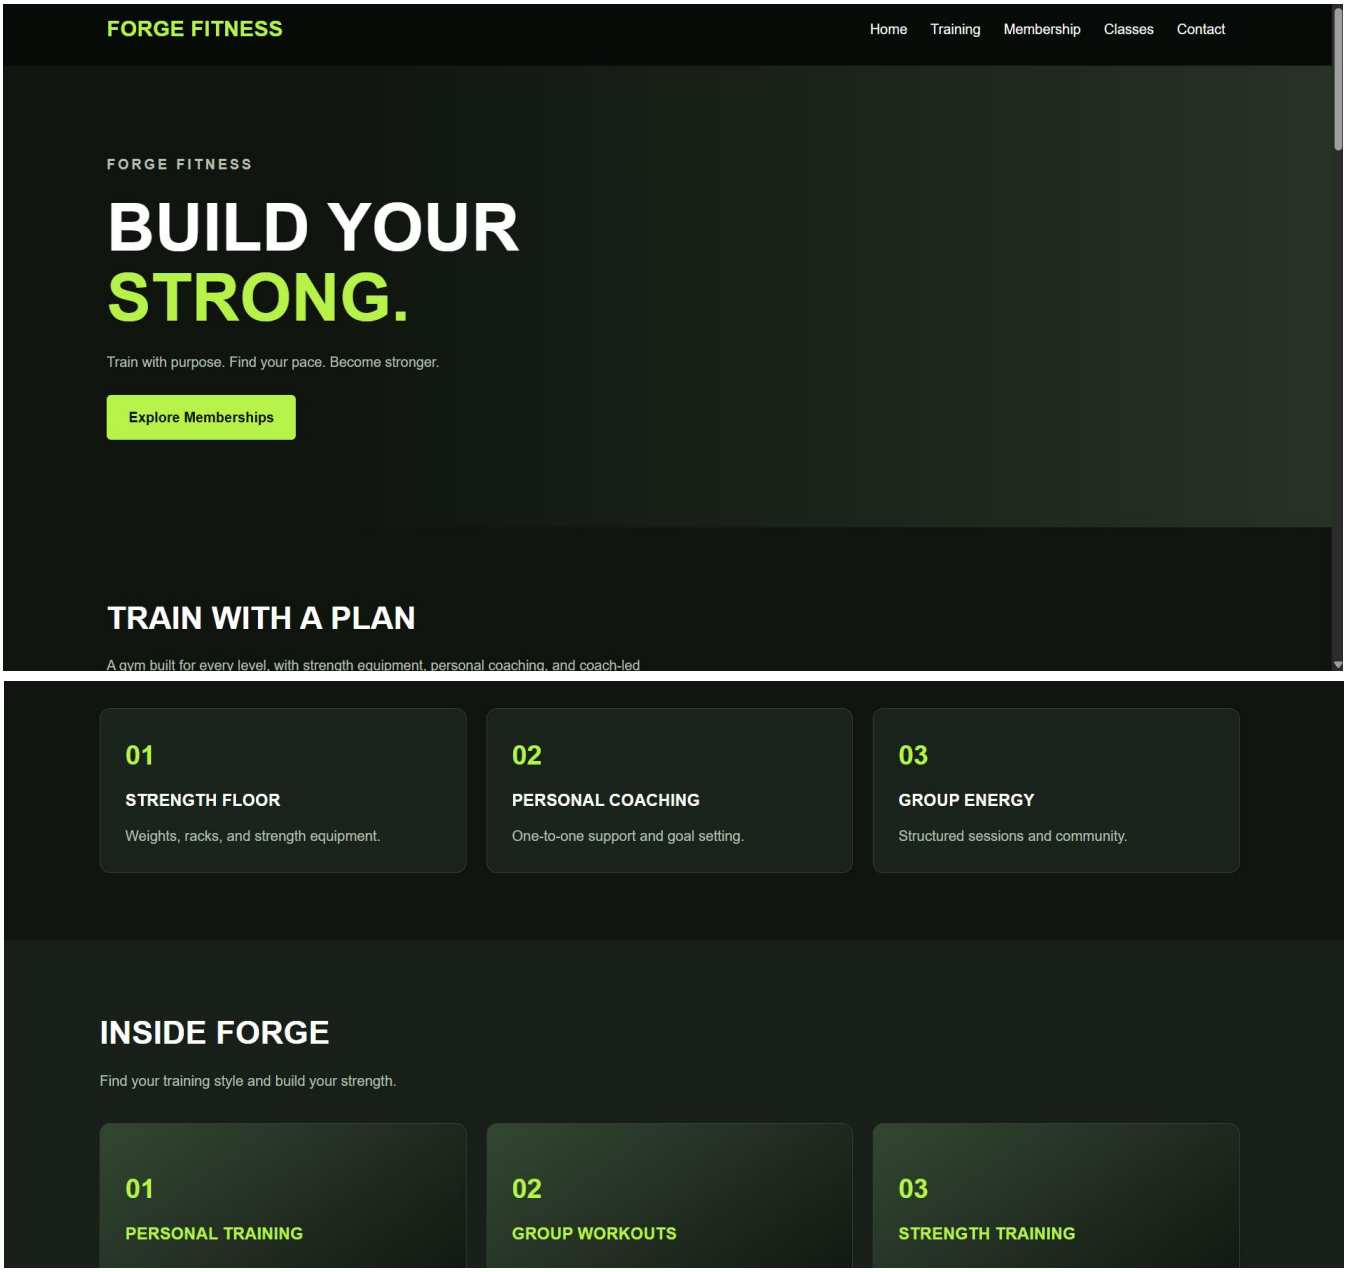

What it does not do

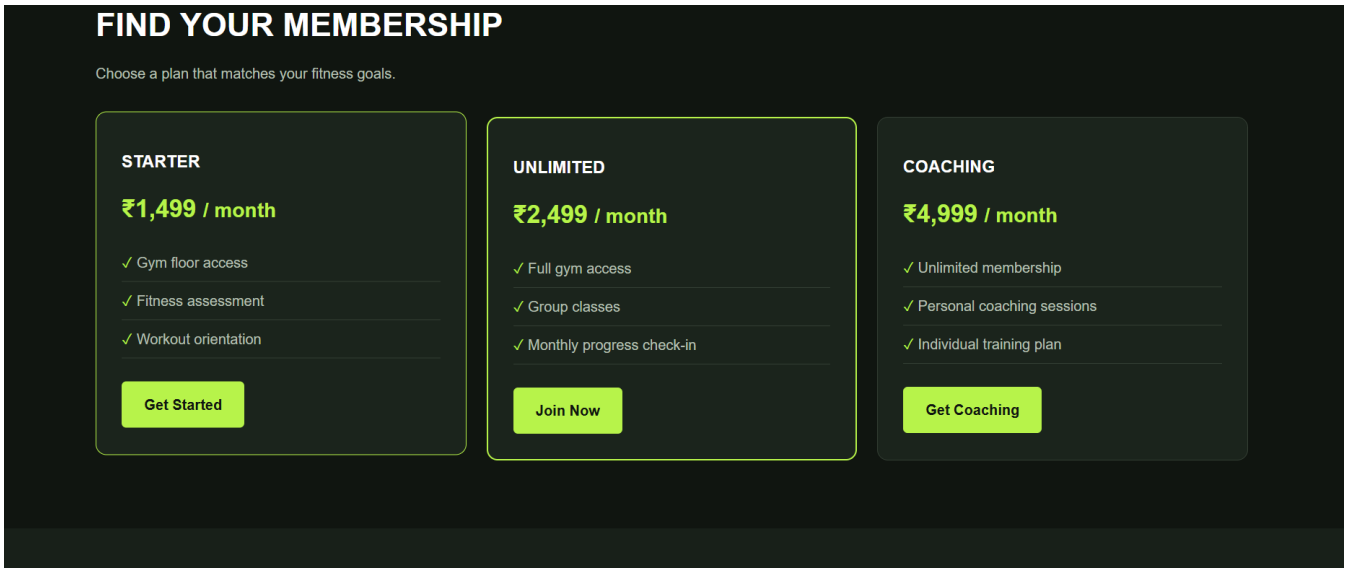

The supplied file does not include a booking system, membership checkout, contact form submission, class registration, data storage, or server-side logic. The schedule and membership information are static text. The contact button relies on the visitor having an email app or handler configured.

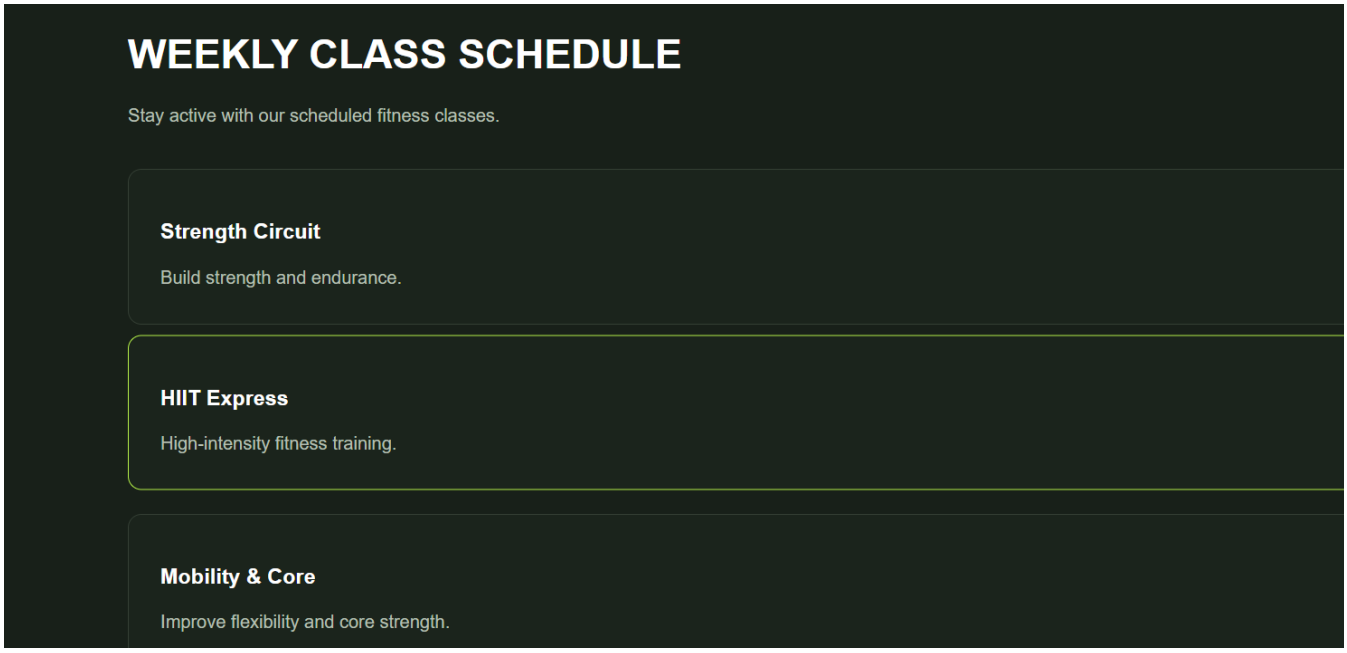

Before launch: replace the sample address, phone, email, and opening hours; confirm plan prices and class times; then test the links and layout on both a phone-sized screen and a desktop browser.
